"Each year it seems like it can't get any bigger, and each year it does!"

That was one comment from the more than 700 persons who attended the Carmel Valley Fireman's Ball held June 19 at the Hidden Valley Seminar auditorium.

The ball is in its second quarter-century and is considered one of "the" events in Carmel Valley. It is sponsored by the Valley Volunteers Incorporated, who assist the Carmel Valley Fire Department as needed.

The volunteers are a common sight to valley residents as they hold weekly drills on winding roads throughout the valley.

Proceeds from the ball are used by the organization for equipment and to support a Little League team which the volunteers sponsor. A certain amount of the proceeds are set aside for a social fund — which is used, of course, for next year's ball.

COWBOY HATS were very common at the Carmel Valley Fireman's Ball. The ball, hosted by Carmel Valley Fire volunteers, was as usual highly successful.

Giants, Tigers battle for lead

By ART BLACK, JR.

The Rapid Blueprint Giants and the Carmel Kiwanis Tigers are battling for first place in the Carmel Senior League as the 1976 season passes the halfway mark.

Both teams are 7-3 in league action this year, with two other teams only a game out at 6-3. These are the Carmel Police Youth Athletic Association Athletics and the Carmel Rotary Mets. The Carmel Host Lions team is in fifth place with a 4-5 mark; the Padres, sponsored by the Bruno's Market in Carmel, is sixth with a 2-7 record; and the Carmel Dental Dodgers are in the Senior League cellar with a 1-9 mark.

In games played recently, the Rotary Mets defeated the Host Lions on June 7 by a score of 7-2. Keith Harper doubled for the Mets, and Ricky Kashfi was credited with the win. Sina Sotoodeh was charged with the Lions' defeat.

In a game that was delayed due to the Middle School graduation and made up last Monday, the Kiwanis Tigers beat the CPYAA Athletics 9-4 behind the pitching of John Lucido, and fine hitting by Gary Childs and Vince Cal, both of whom doubled for the Tigers. Bruce Keefer was tagged with the loss, and Charlie Allaire hit a double in the losing cause.

On Wednesday, June 9, the Rapid Blueprint Giants slid by the Bruno's Market Padres 3-1. Scott Thigpen was the winner, Pat Kelly was tagged with the loss. Bob Slaughter doubled for the Padres, and the Padres also turned over a double play, from the pitcher (Pat Kelly) to Pat O'Hara. Offensively, the Giants were strong as Andy Premier and Paul St. Germain both went 2-3 at the plate.

The Dental Dodgers garnered their only victory thus far this season on Thursday, June 10, at the Carmel High School diamond. It was a tough one to lose for Host Lions' pitcher John Harbert, who hurled a three-hitter, but the Dodgers finally emerged victorious 3-2. Chris Cryns was the winner, and Vince Sturgill was the hot bat with 3-4 at the plate for the Lions. Also on Thursday, at the Middle School field, the Mets outbatted the Athletics 9-7. Cory Bliesner of the Athletics and Ricky Kashfi of the Mets both doubled. David McKenzie was credited with the win, Bruce Keefer was charged with the loss.

Saturday, June 12, saw a triple-header at the Carmel High diamond. The first game pitted the Lions against the Padres. The Lions came out ahead, defeating the Padres 10-6. Tim Martin scored the win, Charlie Houghton was

Title I — a success at Tularcitos

By DAVID COLE

When a new student to Tularcitos Elementary School was told she was going to be taking part in the Title I program there, she threatened to throw a fit. She joined the program anyway, and at the end of this year she threatened to throw a fit if she wasn't allowed back in Title I classes next year.

Another child tried to get into a Title I class, reasoning that she had an "in" to the program because her mother worked there as a classroom aide.

Oddly enough, this kind of enthusiasm is being generated, not for a play period, but for a program of concentrated learning. Financed by federal funds under the Elementary Secondary Education Act (ESEA), Title I attempts to bring students up to grade level through supplementary instruction.

Although the formal aims and procedures of the Title I program are couched in educationese, what the program boils down to is basically this: students who are having problems with some facet of their classroom work come in for a short time during school hours to receive individualized attention.

Individualized attention of this type apparently pays off. Students in Title I reading instruction averaged a jump of two months worth of growth per one month of actual instruction. Title I math students averaged three months learning per month of instruction.

Months of growth during this year's six month instructional period ranged from one month to a high of 51 months in reading, and from nine months to a high of 54 months in math. Language learning, which thus far has played only a small part in Tularcitos' program, ranged from no months growth to 53 months.

The school's Title I project has been proceeding for several years but has been somewhat hampered by a shortage of materials and only one specialist to do all the work.

This fall, the Carmel Unified School District was able to hire two new teachers — Marilyn Bjonerud and Berta Bender — for the program and came up with more learning material. Next year, the program will continue on in high gear since it has been allotted a $41,000 budget.

All the money for Tularcitos' Title I program comes from the federal government and goes toward supplies, books and salaries. Last year, Title I taught 120 student classes to 70 students.

Basically, Title I works this way: A regular classroom teacher notices that a particular student seems to be falling behind the rest of the class in some facet of school work. The child's parents are consulted and, if they agree, the child is tested to determine grade level.

If, for instance, a fourth grader tests out to only 1.4 in math (First school year, fourth month level of education), the student may be admitted to the Title I program for that area in which he is weak.

During the school day, as prearranged with the student's teacher, the student goes to a half-hour or 45-minute class of individualized instruction, usually with four other students who have similar problems. The teacher is joined by two parent aides, so there is almost a one-to-one relationship between instructor and child.

Children are re-tested periodically and once a child reaches his grade level, he leaves Title I.

Although Title I admittance infers that a child has "fallen behind," there is no negative stigma attached to the program because there are a wide variety of reasons for learning problems, few of which have anything to do with the child's native intelligence.

An example of the kinds of problems Title I addresses is the third grader who read at the one month level. As teacher Bender discovered, the problem was a small one which had mushroomed into a major complication.

The child has been taught to read all the sounds, but no one had taught her how to put them together. She could read "tea" and "ch" and "er," but couldn't put them together to form "teacher."

During the short period between December and March, when the first two testings were conducted for the student, she rose to second grade, third month level.

What the Title I program attempts to do is to go back to basics. In a crowded classroom, where the large majority of children are working around grade level, there's little chance for a teacher to give one or two students special attention. That's where Title I comes in.

If a student is having trouble with math problems, he may be having trouble reading the instructions or he may be having trouble conceptualizing how numbers work. Title I goes backward until the exact source of the trouble is located.

In some cases, as with one of Bjonerud's fifth graders, the problem is simply one of attitude. When this student tested in the beginning of the year he received a 3.7 in reading and a 3.3 in math. By the end of the year he was testing at almost a ninth grade level in reading and at a seventh grade level in math.

"He was like a different person taking that second test," Bjonerud says. "Before, when he took the test, he just didn't care."

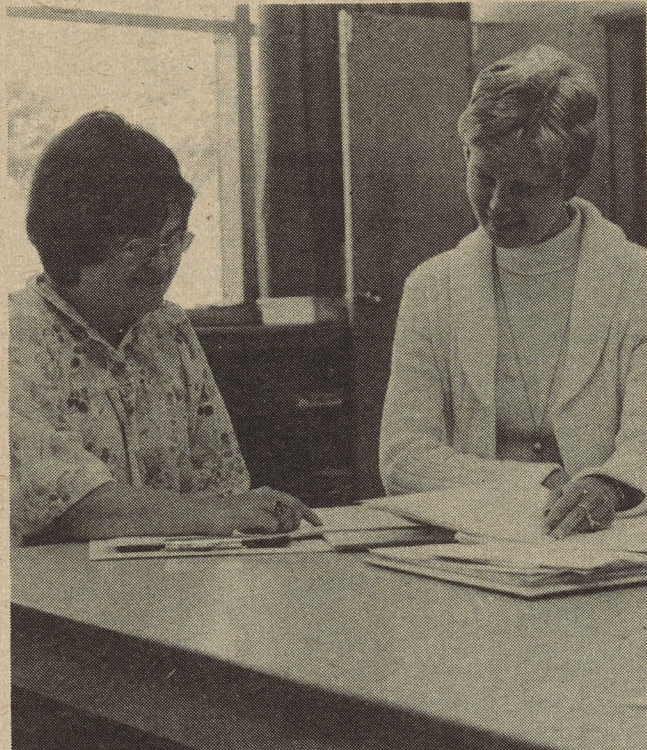

Tularcitos principal Phil Smith says that the Title I program is no reflection on the regular classroom teachers.

"Because there's no unified theory of how people learn," Smith explains, "there's a need for programs like this."

Smith points out that one of the greatest advantages to Title I is simply that the Title I teachers can really get to know their students.

"Often some things presented in a classroom setting just never register," he says.

As parent aide Gail Buche, two of whose children were in Title I for a while says, "Frankly, I wish every child could use this program."

TITLE I TEACHERS Berta Bender and Marilyn Bjonerud of Tularcitos School are pleased with the success of the program this year.

Cypress dominates AAU age group

The Cypress Swim Club continued its domination of the 15-17 age group by sweeping the gold medals in every single event in that age group at the 1976 AAU Region XIII Junior Olympic Synchronized Swimming Championships this past weekend at the Santa Clara International Swim Center.

Gerri Brandly of Cypress won four gold medals, taking first place in figures, solos, duets and teams. Tina Wald, her duet partner, won two golds, one in duet and one in team.

Kathryn Blevens and Robin Currier were the nearest competition to Brandly and Wald, winning the silver medals, and placing one point behind them. This was a reversal of positions from the Pacific AAU qualifying meet last month, when Blevens and Currier defeated their teammates. Hall and Schremp of the Walnut Creek Aquanauts again held onto third place 2.2 points behind the silver medalists.

The Cypress foursome, with alternates Anne-Maree Cantwell and Laura Steinmetz, then combined to defend their team title, easily beating their nearest rivals from the Hayward Flying Fins by eight points. Gerri Brandly won the solo event by three points ahead of Karen Callaghan and Suzanne Cameron of Walnut Creek, who were separated in second and third by only three-tenths of a point. This placement held true for the figures competition as well, where Kathryn Blevens placed fourth.

Other Cypress placements in 15-17 Figures competition were: Currier, 15th; Wald, 18th; Cantwell, 24th; and Steinmetz, 39th. Entered only in the 13-14 Figures competition were Allyson Braud, who placed 11th, and Pavia Wald, who placed 15th. There were 209 swimmers from all over California participating in the Regional Junior Olympic Championships. To qualify for the Regional Junior Olympic Championships, each participating swimmer had to place among the top three in her event in her own district AAU qualifying meet, so the Regionals annually bring together the top synchronized swimmers in the state in each age group from 10-and-under through 15-17's.

Shakespeare at Forest Theater July 1

The Forest Theater Guild in cooperation with Monterey Peninsula College is producing Shakespeare's "Macbeth" July 1 to Aug. 28, alternating weekends with "The Comedy of Errors" July 8 to Sept. 4.

Donald J. Ross, director of "Macbeth" has been a resident of the Peninsula for 19 years and has appeared at the Pasadena Playhouse, Summer Stock in New York, off-Broadway and most recently at the Forest Theater as Malvolio in "The Merchant of Venice." He was director of "The Taming of the Shrew" at Forest Theater last summer. Macbeth will be portrayed by Ramon Wilson, last seen in "The Taming of the Shrew." Ron Bostwick, one of the performers under the Guild's first director, Herbert Heron, will portray Duncan.

For the first time a grandmother and grandson duo will appear. Betty Fowlston, well known to Peninsula theater buffs for her many appearances from serious drama to comedy, will be Lady Macbeth. Betty's grandson, Chip Lenno, will be making his debut as the son of Macduff. In addition, Chip represents the third generation to perform at the Forest Theater.

Peter B. Magee, director of "Comedy of Errors" learned technical aspects of the theater while at Southern Illinois University with an acting assistantship and was a director at the McGuane Park Theater in Chicago, Ill.

The outdoor Forest Theater located at Mountain View and Santa Rita streets in Carmel seats 700 persons and features two roaring fires at each side of the seating area. The theater box office will open at 7:30 p.m. each evening of performance on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with the drama to start at 8:30 p.m. Tickets for adults are $3.50 and $2.50 for full time students and enlisted military.

"Macbeth" can be seen July 1, 2, 3; 15, 16, 17; 29, 30, 31; Aug. 12, 13, 14; 26, 27, 28. "Comedy of Errors", July 8, 9, 10; 22, 23, 24; Aug. 5, 6, 7; 19, 20, 21; Sept. 2, 3, 4.

J. SCOTT SMITH entertains at the piano every Sunday, Monday and Tuesday evenings at the Outrigger on Cannery Row. He was a member of the group "Landing Party" which disbanded in January of this year. At the Outrigger he plays from 8 to 12 p.m.

LADY MACBETH (Betty Fowlston) takes the hand of the king (Ron Bostwick) in a scene from "MacBeth" to be presented at the Forest Theater in Carmel this summer.

P.G. exhibits set

The Monterey Peninsula Watercolor Society will present a showing of about 75 paintings during July at the Pacific Grove Art Center. The opening reception is scheduled for Friday, July 2 from 7-9 p.m. in the Main Gallery. The opening will also feature an exhibit in the Photo Gallery by Gordon Robson of Japanese prints in the style of Kuniyoshi, which first arrived in Europe as the wrapping paper around ceramic import ware.

A broad range of watercolors, featuring traditional landscapes will be shown by the 102-member organization which began in 1971 with four members. It holds regular painting sessions each Tuesday on the Peninsula or field trips to other sites. It has sponsored workshops headed by Robert E. Wood, Jane Burnham, Rollin Pickford, Lee Weise and Bud Shackleford.

The Society has no elected officers, no bylaws, and no business meetings and their "noble leader", one of the original four, publishes a monthly newsletter and schedule of painting sites from suggestions of the members. A nominal fee is charged to cover costs of printing and postage, and the Society donates any funds left over at the end of the year to the Annual Watercolor Competitive at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History.

The original purpose of the Society was to provide painting locations for watercolorists to gather together each week and paint. Some of the members are professionals. There are no lessons or critiques at the weekly sessions. The Society is not interested in how well a person paints; it is open to all painters who enjoy getting out and painting watercolors with a group.

Robson, in the Photo Gallery, doing graduate work at the University of California at Berkeley in Asian Studies, returned to the source of the Japanese prints not to borrow from them but to place himself in a position to work through them to the roots of Japan's 19th century aesthetic. Robson in effect became an apprentice to the Japanese printmaker one century removed. Following his interest in the Samurai class Robson took Utagawa Kuniyoshi (1798-1861) skilled landscapist and an interesting experiment in the harmonious fusion of native and western styles, as his master.

Perhaps the most important artistic communication between the East and West in the 19th century came in the form of these small woodblock prints on handmade paper. On these scraps of paper, called Ukiyo-e, were pictures of the passing world; the world of Japan under the Shoguns. These prints, after use as wrapping paper, were soon picked up and later actively collected by a number of major impressionists and post-impressionist artists, especially in France, who translated some of the Japanese conceptions of color and design into their own work.

This special showing has been scheduled for the Feast of Lanterns celebration and may be seen daily, Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. with no charge. The Pacific Grove Art Center is located upstairs at 568 Lighthouse Ave.

It's now a brother act backing Len Dixon at the Captain's Cove Restaurant on Cannery Row. "Old Brown Eyes" has asked Woody Barr to join his brother Bob at the Cove spotlight and the result should be some pleasant low-key jazz.

This isn't the first time that Len has switched from a keyboard orientation to guitar. During his long career on the Tahoe circuit, Len was part of a duo called the Autumn Council in which he was backed by guitar only.

"I just work on the idea that the guitar is now playing the melody lines instead of a piano and it works out quite well. And with Woody coming in on lead guitar, I feel very comfortable," said Dixon. Len has worked with Bob on bass for about six months now and has sung with Woody on many occasions.

The concept of the jazz singer backed by a dominant guitar instead of keyboard has certainly proven itself recently with the emergence of George Benson's "Breezin'" album as the top selling LP on all the jazz lists. It seems Len is flowing with the trend.

By the way, Woody Barr is part of the 20th Century Records act Redwood City and his brother Bob toured the Atlantic Coast circuit with a lounge act named Tequila Sunrise so you will hear some fine professional picking at the Captain's Cove.

You can catch Len and company from 8:30 to 1 a.m. Thursday through Saturday and from 7 to 11 on Sunday eve.

Blues vocalist Scotty Wright — who has jammed with just about every entertainer on the Peninsula — may be on the way to his first big break. He has just signed an artist's representation pact with L.A. agent Sara Delacey and will be videotaping his act this Sunday afternoon at the Barrel House on Alvarado Street in Monterey.

At press time, Scotty hadn't worked out the total band he'll be tapping with, but he does know that guitarist Larry Scala will be with him at the session as well as at any gigs that may come as a result of Sunday's work. The action gets underway around 2 p.m.

Who says a twenty-seven year old jazz lover who still gets off on the rock music of the late sixties can't get excited? Guess who were wandering about Carmel last weekend? Mark Vollman and Howard Kaylan — the leading figures of that musical entourage known as the Turtles.

The Turtles tried a little bit of everything from Dylan's "It Ain't Me, Babe" to the now classic "Happy Together" until they parted in the early seventies. Since then, Vollman and Kaylan have spent some time with Frank Zappa and now work professionally under the names Flo and Eddy — an act synonymous with the maddest moments of the Turtles. Vollman said the next Flo and Eddie LP is due from Columbia August-1.

And for all you Turtles fans out there who still possess good copies of their albums on the White Whale label, keep them under lock and key. Vollman says they have now been officially been taken off the market and you may have a collector's item on your hands in a little while.

Bassist Foye Walkup who backs Julie Domac at the Hatchcover, will be jamming with members of the defunct Cannery Roll group at the Presidio Monterey Officers Club every Friday night in July.

Meanwhile, he'll be unpacking artifacts of the rails picked up during a two-week trip throughout the mining towns of Colorado. You can spot the caboose in front of the Warehouse, just above the intersection of Cannery Row and Prescott... Mother Nature has played a dirty trick on horses. She made them our favorite animal for riding. She made horses our favorite animal for carrying weight, but she gave them the least likely bone structure of all the domestic animals. Of all the animals around the ranch, the horse is the worst constructed for riding. Ach, du leiber, better you should ride a pig!

Think about the engineering stress and strain. A pig's arched back is a better weight bearing structure than a horse's sagging back. Cloven feet are more adaptable to extra weight (and top heavy weight at that) than the horse's ridiculous tippy-toe on the balanced finger bones.

A dog has a better foot and paw structure than a horse does for schlepping human gear about. The actress on the television series Daktari had no problems riding a lion.

As any mommy who has trooped about with a heavy toddler can tell you, the most efficient weight carrying domestic animal is the human being. The arched foot puts spring in the step. The double leg bones can withstand lateral strains that would pop a splint on a horse. The upright position can balance a bigger load with fewer points of strain than suffered by animals who sling loads horizontally between front and rear quarters.

A human being can carry an additional weight equal to his own. No horse could do that.

A horse is not badly built for pulling weight. The big scapula bones (shoulder blades) and the heavy front end allow a horse to pull almost his own weight. But, the spinal vertebrae are too small to carry more than one-fifth to one-fourth of the horse's weight. Furthermore the smallest spinal vertebrae are just under and behind where the rider usually sits. The horse could carry more weight on his withers or on his croup but not on the place where we usually put it — his back. Owners of small horses should be particularly aware of which of the spinal vertebrae they are weighting. The seeming additional strength of large horses is not due to their greater height and weight solely, but to the fact that the rider is not perched on the most vulnerable of the spinal vertebrae.

And about that heavy front end of the horse: That makes it harder to carry a rider too. It is the front legs that "go" first: side bones, sesamoids, splints, bowed tendons, ringbone, navicular disease, popped knees, bucked shins. All front end problems!

In spite of the great difficulties, humans still like to ride horses. We have invented a number of gimmicks to make this possible. It's only sporting to give the horse half a chance to bear up under what we lay on him.

Saddles — they're for the horse's benefit not for the rider's. They take the rider's weight off the spinal vertebrae and distribute it over the horse's dorsal muscles.

Not over a small section of the horse's back muscles either, but over a much larger area than any rider's bottom would contact. Well, most any rider.

Even in Black Beauty's time people understood that horses need to get their heads down to carry weight. Black Beauty's author, Anna Sewell, preached against overcheck bits on harness horses. In this country working cowboys and dressage riders as well as the everyday pleasure rider agree that the low headed horse works the best and lasts the longest. Only "light hands" should ride leverage-type bridles that lift the horse's nose. Only the "light hands" who know how to ride such a bridle without lifting the horse's nose. Everyone else, stick to bosals and snaffles. Young horses should stick to bosals or snaffles, anyhow.

Now that X-rays have shown that horses' legs do not calcify until 36 months of age — later in some breeds — we stay off them until they get their bones set. Then, since it takes a while longer to build up mature muscle and tendon on those young bones, we do not jump, do quick stops or fast turns, nor "collected" work, nor ride double, nor rope, nor race, nor nuthin' for another year or two after that.

Of the horses who are sound and ridable in their twenties, none, not any were worked young. Ask any horseman, the real kind of horseman who keeps his horses and works them wisely.

Of the horses bought by the dogfood dealer with all the front end problems of unsoundness we mentioned and a few we didn't, EVERY SINGLE ONE was abused by thoughtless humans and most often abused YOUNG! Dogfood is made, not born.

Other gimmicks humans use to aid a horse's natural disabilities include shin boots or leg wraps to protect the horse's legs from the work we humans put him to... things he would rarely think of in his pasture. We shoe his feet so they may dance lightly over the countryside. And we reshoe every six weeks so as not to pinch the growing hoof.

We prepare our horses with fitness programs and feeding programs (including monthly worming) for the work of carrying their own body farther and faster than they would think to do on their own, plus carrying the extra weight of a human on top.

Cavemen ate ponies. Modern man grew them into big delicate creatures that need a lot of care just for the pleasure of riding. Do you suppose a long range breeding program could do the same for pigs?

tagged with the loss. John Hollister and Joe Sturgill both doubled. In the second game, the Kiwanis Tigers slid by the Dental Dodgers 5-3. John Pirotte pitched the victory for the Tigers, David Spear was charged with the loss. The Tigers turned a double-play from Childs to Jeff Hogans. Doubles were hit by David Spear and Bob Berry of the Dodgers and Vince Cal of the Tigers. In Saturday's nitecap, Carmel High Junior Varsity star Mark Dodd pitched a no-hitter for the CPYAA Athletics against the Rapid Blueprint Giants, and was the game's leading hitter with two doubles and 2-4 at the plate. Bruce Keefer also doubled for the victors and went 2-4. The Giants' 'peter Shepard was tagged with the loss. Last Monday saw Bruno's Padres defeat the Dental Dodgers 9-5. Pat Kelly, who was the Carmel High Frosh's winningest pitcher this year, got the win, and Kip Murchison was tagged with the loss. Charlie Houghton of the Padres tripled, and there were doubles by Houghton, Micah Willingham of the Padres and Steve Prieto of the Dodgers. Charlie Houghton was the Padres' leading hitter with 2-4. Bob Berry led the Dodgers with a .667 mark (2-3).

On Tuesday, the Kiwanis Tigers handed the Rapid Giants a 5-1 loss. Pirotte pitched the win for the Tigers and Dwight Spicer added some offensive punch with a double. Scott Thigpen doubled in the losing cause and also was the pitcher of record. Andy Premier of the Giants was the game's leading hitter with a 3-4 mark.

The CPYAA Athletics outlasted the Padres on Wednesday in a game which ended up at 17-11. After spotting the A's four runs in the first, the Padres came back with a staggering nine runs in their half of the first, but could only score twice more, both in the fourth inning, as the Athletics, behind good hitting by Mark Dodd (triple) scored five runs in the second, three more in the fourth, a singleton in the fifth and four in the sixth for the final score of 17-11. Dodd also picked up the win. Pat O'Hara was charged with the loss.

In Thursday's "double-header", the game at Carmel High School was won by the Mets in another "football" game. The Mets outslugged the Dental Dodgers 14-13.
